Sacramento, California (June 27, 2017): AVID (Advancement Via Individual Determination), a nationally recognized nonprofit, will present the AVID Teacher Advocacy Award to five deserving California teachers next month in Sacramento. As a part of this honor, the winners will receive $10,000 for AVID implementation and growth at their schools. The award and cash prize are made possible thanks to an anonymous donor.

Award winners must demonstrate student advocacy, overcome challenges, and show leadership in supporting AVID's mission to help all students be college ready. This year's winners will be recognized in front of more than 3,000 educators at the Sacramento Convention Center on July 11, at 4:00 p.m. as part of this year's AVID Summer Institute.

AVID CEO, Sandy Husk praised the winners' efforts, "Teacher Advocacy Award Winners go above and beyond to support their students and schools. I am happy that we can honor them thanks to the generosity of an anonymous donor. These teachers are doing the work that will make college dreams a reality for countless California children."
